2. [REDACTED] an infantry school for VP officers and officer candidates was located at the Frenzlau airfield. The course there had just ended, having lasted one year. German weapons which had been used during field training included model 98-K carbines, model 08/15 light machine guns, model 42 light machine guns, and model 08 pistols. Soviet arms, with which the trainees had practiced only in the billeting area were allegedly kept ready for an emergency, complete with ammunition. During the year of training, the trainees were granted a two-week and a one-week leave. Upon graduation from the school, the trainees were granted another one-week leave prior to their reassignment to VP units as infantry instructors.

3. A special VP train arrived at the Frenzlau railroad station at about 2:40 p.m. on 16 November. Of the VP personnel who arrived aboard that train, about 300, chiefly VP Jachtmeister, went to the barracks installation on Alsenstrasse while about 500 VP officer candidates and Kommissare went to the Fliegerhorst Kaserne. [REDACTED] some of the arrivals were returning from furlough while others were in Frenzlau for the first time. VP officers standing at two street intersections showed the incoming VP personnel the way to the installations. At about 4 p.m., about 400 police left the Fliegerhorst Kaserne and about 200 police the Alsen Kaserne, marching to the railroad station. They boarded the special VP train and left at 4:40 p.m., heading south. A railroad employee said that the special VP train came from Leipzig, proceeded to Pasewalk and returned to Leipzig. The leave train [REDACTED] stopped only in Angermunde, Eberswalde, and on a side-track at Berlin-Karow, where all policemen living in the Berlin area got out. **
